

MIRFIELD.

The principal inhabitants of the village of Mirfield have testified their loyalty by giving to the poorer class dinner and tea. The paupers in the workhouse were regaled with old English cheer—roast beef and plum pudding, which was ordered by the overseers. Mr. B. Walker, maltster, dined and gave tea to upwards of one hundred of his tenants and workmen, in the spacious malt-house newly-erected in Hopton, near Mirfield. B. Wilson, Esq., also gave to all his tenants dinner and tea, &c.
